CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGIST & MENTAL HEALTH COACH FOR LEADERS

Clinical Psychologist | Workplace Mental Health Coach | Keynote Speaker | Host of “Beneath the Busy” Podcast

Lauren Davis is a Clinical Psychologist and Mental Health Coach who brings over 20+ years of psychological expertise into the world of work. She blends her rare combination of clinical depth with real-world organisational insight to show how mental health is not a side issue, but the foundation of sustainable performance for individuals, teams, and organisations.

Drawing on decades of therapeutic practice, Lauren translates psychological understanding into practical tools that help people recognise the hidden drivers of burnout, anxiety, and overperformance. She guides audiences to lead and live with greater clarity, composure, and care. Going far beyond surface-level wellbeing, her work offers a deeper view of the human mind at work and how to create environments where people can stay well while doing demanding jobs.

Lauren’s facilitation style is warm, firm, and insight-driven. She creates a space where audiences can slow down, think deeply, and examine the human dynamics that shape performance and wellbeing. Drawing on her clinical expertise, she brings clarity and calm to complex group settings, using practical frameworks and deep listening to surface the patterns and pressures that shape how we lead, collaborate, and deliver. Her approach balances empathy with challenge, fostering honest reflection and accountability. Audiences describe her sessions as a rare blend of psychological depth and practical relevance that strengthens relationships, emotional intelligence, and psychological safety across teams and organisations.
